

Parthenon it ain't

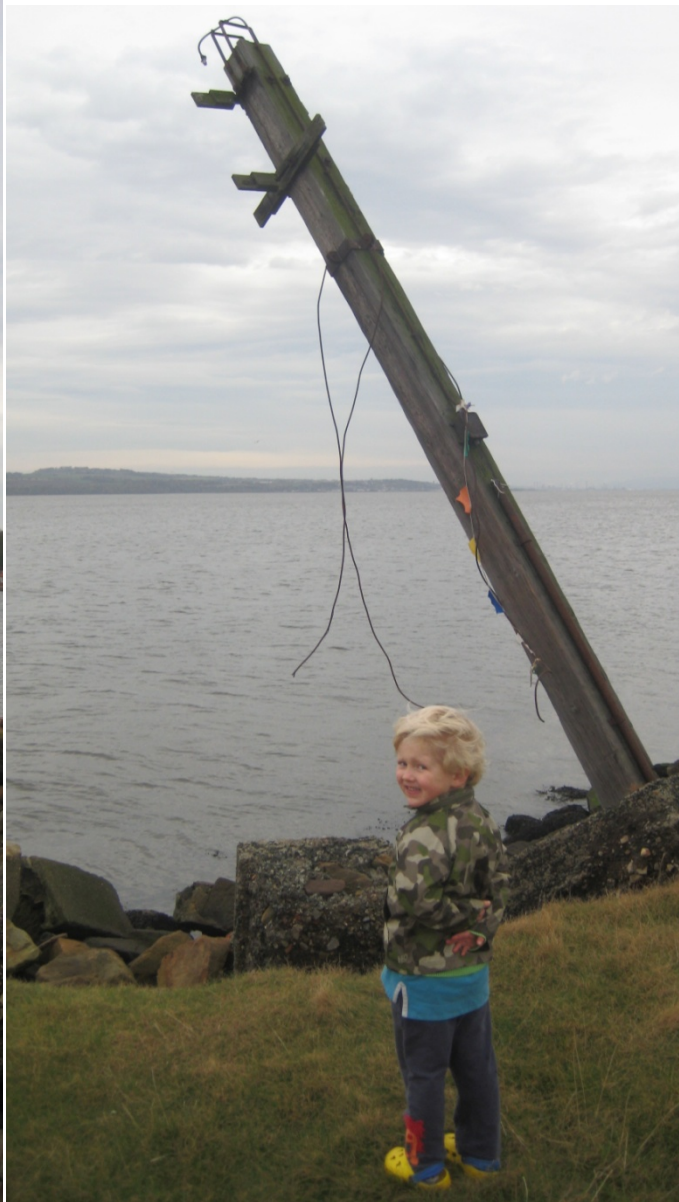

In good repair it ain't

Was it bombed?

One would be forgiven for thinking that "One of the bombs fired by Morosini, the Venetian had struck it, but it is simply a case of neglect and lack of maintenance. The very things we were told the Greek people, under occupation by a foreign army were guilty of in Athens in 1801.

The pier at Limekilns in Fife is the property of Broomhall Estates the factoring company that runs the lands and buildings belonging to the Earl of Elgin. The Earl is a very influential man in Fife and the grass on top of the pier had been looked after for years by Fife Council who grassed the area and tend it cutting the grass and keeping it tidy, but as if that wasn't enough when the end of the pier crumbled and fell into the sea the laird wanted the rate-payers to pick up the tab for repairing it. I objected strongly to this and it hasn't been repaired to date and is in a dangerous condition with notices posted to that effect.
